What is domestic and family violence?

Domestic and Family Violence occur when a person uses some form of violence such as physical, emotional, sexual, spiritual, technological, financial, social or cultural to control another person in a current or previous relationship.

Over 98% of cases of domestic and family violence victims are women.

Domestic and Family Violence could include:

- Punching, hitting, slapping, throwing of objects, pushing, using a weapon.
- Threats to hurt or injure a woman or child.
- Constant put downs, humiliating comments in public and at home, being yelled at.
- Comments directed at intimidating or frightening the woman or child.
- Causing injury or harming pets or destroying property.
- Unwanted sexual touching or activities or comments.
- Isolating the woman from family and friends.
- Depriving the woman of basic needs such as money or food.

Domestic and family violence is a crime.

It affects not only you but your children also. Children experiencing and witnessing domestic and family violence can be traumatised throughout their entire life.

You have the right to feel safe.

If you are experiencing domestic and family violence, below are steps you can do:

- Say "NO" to any form of violence.
- Talk to someone you trust.
- Call the Police on 000.
- Get advice from a professional such as:
 - Domestic Violence Line Counsellor at a Community Health Centre in your area.
 - Family support worker at a community organisation.
 - Worker from Women's Domestic Violence Court Assistance Scheme (WDVCAS) at local court.
- Call the police if you are at risk of being injured or hurt.
- Go to either the chamber magistrate at the local court or go to the police station to get an Apprehended Violence Order (AVO) to stop your partner from hurting you.
